LAND ACKNOWLEDGEMENT FOR MICHIGAN STATE UNIVERSITY

Michigan State University occupies the ancestral, traditional and contemporary lands of the Anishinaabeg – Three Fires Confederacy of Ojibwe, Odawa and Potawatomi peoples. In particular, the university resides on land ceded in the 1819 Treaty of Saginaw. We recognize Michigan's 12 federally recognized Native Nations, historic Indigenous communities in Michigan, Indigenous individuals and communities who live here now, and those who were forcibly removed from their homelands. In offering this land acknowledgement, we affirm Indigenous sovereignty, history and experiences.

outstanding community-engaged scholarship

Introduced by Eric K. Torng, Responsible Administrator and Associate Dean of the Graduate School

This award is co-sponsored by The Graduate School.

2022 Recipients

SHARIEKA BOTEX, College of Arts and Letters

Shaping Society Through Scholarship and Action

In 2021, Shareika Botex served as a member of the MSU Graduate Leader Institute, which empowers Spartans to take a proactive approach to their leadership. Through this program, Botex planned a two-day event inviting a panel of Black Women Scholars at MSU to discuss their journeys and work as educators and scholars, while also providing space for community members and partners to engage in dialogue. Panel discussions focused on how the scholars' work provided support and resources for helping community progression, addressed societal issues, and uplifted the Black community and other communities with whom they collaborate.

WILFREDO FLORES, College of Arts and Letters

Queering Medicine: Intake Form Guidance for Providers

In 2018, Wilfredo Flores began partnering with local healthcare providers, including Ingham County's Health Department, to develop more equitable client intake forms for queer and transgender people. Along with members of Queering Medicine (QM), a group cofounded by Flores to improve health outcomes for the LGBTQ+ community, research began by engaging in conversations with queer-friendly providers. Based on discussion and feedback, Flores and QM were able to distribute an initial intake form to a variety of providers, and, in the spring of 2020, the recommendation packet was finalized. Subsequently, several providers have used the form, and Flores intends to follow-up to further improve its usability.

2022 Recipients

KAYLEIGH WARD, College of Social Science

Reviving Community: Rebuilding Social Recovery in Rural Post-Disaster Japan

The Great East Japan Earthquake in 2011 left the coastal community of Minamisanriku, Miyagi, in ruins. In the years following, Minamisanriku found itself grappling with issues including depopulation, aging, unemployment and other forms of deprivation. Kayleigh Ward has dedicated her research to helping with disaster relief following the earthquake and assisting these communities by implementing rebuilding and recovery processes. These have included conflict resolution through forums, resident and stakeholder networking, and promoting a culture of mutual understanding. Today local schools, tourist associations, training centers and other community resources have continued partnering to address the rebuilding processes.

Commendations for Exceptional Effort in Community Engagement Scholarship

Zoe Hansen, College of Natural Science

Girls Math and Science Day (GMSD)

For years, Zoe Hansen has worked with middle school aged girls through the annual Girls Math and Science Day, presented by the MSU Graduate Women in Science Mid-Michigan Chapter. As co-chair of planning and facilitating the event, Hansen ensures activities relate to science, technology, engineering, or mathematics (STEM). The number of participants increases annually, further recognizing the importance of retaining girls in STEM.

Debra Lynn Miller, College of Social Science

Core Therapist Skills and Training Methods Supporting the Implementation of Evidence-Based Practices with Severe Emotionally Disturbed Children in Community Mental Health Settings: A Mixed Method Delphi Study

A partnership built on collaboration and networking led Debra Miller to research the skills necessary for therapists to effectively use evidence-based practices (EBPs) to treat serious emotional disturbances in youth. Working with families, along with Community Mental Health for Central Michigan, Miller has laid the groundwork for effective EBP usage with this population of youth in the future.

Ji Youn Shin, College of Communication Arts and Sciences

Exploring Experiential Knowledge and Assets of Family Caregivers

The intersection of Design and Human-Computer Interaction is something Ji Youn Shin has long been researching, especially as it relates to community health. She focused on incorporating community partners' experiential knowledge and existing assets in technology design to develop deeper understandings of the dynamics between various stakeholders in healthcare, including both patient and caregiver.

Introduced by Quentin R. Tyler, Director, MSU Extension and Associate Dean and Director for Diversity, Equity, and Inclusion, College of Agriculture and Natural Resources

In 2017, an estimated 27% of Michigan households with school-aged children, many located in rural parts of the state, did not have access to broadband connectivity. As similar patterns began prevailing across the United States, Johannes Bauer and Keith Hampton of MSU's Quello Center, along with Merit Network, Inc., partnered to develop conceptual frameworks, methods, and tools to help overcome discrepancies in access to high-speed Internet.

Project goals revolved around creating methods to build reliable, spatially granular data, and maps of household connectivity, while also developing a deeper theoretical and empirical understanding of implications of poor or lacking broadband access.

Initial measures and policies were impeded by the dearth of reliable information about digital inequalities and an incomplete understanding of repercussions for individuals, communities, and society.

Throughout the past four years, however, the collaboration has broadened from the Quello Center and Merit Network to include school districts and communities with an interest in improving digital equity and inclusion. The knowledge gained through these partnerships has improved the development and planning of remedial measures. Furthermore, partners are able to leverage it to attract private investment and obtain public funding to bridge digital divides and affect thousands of households across Michigan.

BIAS BUSTERS FAITH-BASED CULTURAL COMPETENCE GUIDES: AN INTERFAITH PUBLISHING ALLIANCE

Joseph P. Grimm, College of Communication Arts and Sciences
InterFaith Leadership Council of Metropolitan Detroit

Introduced by Jabbar R. Bennett, Vice President and Chief Diversity Officer

Since 2013, Joe Grimm and students from MSU's School of Journalism have worked with community partners to battle stereotypes, elevate understanding, and encourage conversations through a series of cultural competency guides titled, "Bias Busters." The InterFaith Leadership Council of Metropolitan Detroit (IFLC) has been a prominent leader in guiding the Bias Busters sub-series on religion as well as on racial and ethnic groups. The guides help student-authors learn about diversity, equity, and inclusion in Grimm's journalism course, and are also a resourceful tool for businesses and organizations. IFLC leaders share their expertise with students by suggesting topics, reviewing drafts to ensure accuracy, and using the guides in their work to create community conversations. Student-authors have learned from individuals from varying religions and backgrounds including Muslim Americans, African Americans, American Jews, Hispanics and Latinos, transgender people, immigrants, and members of the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints.

To date, more than 7,000 guides have been sold, with more than 500 people being credited in the guides as collaborators, including students and community members. The series has resulted in several community programs, teach-ins, corporate trainings, and a diversity guide for the National Education Writers Association.

Introduced by Francisco A. Villarruel, Interim Director, Julian Samora Research Institute and Faculty Grievance Official

The Archivo de Respuestas Emergencias de Puerto Rico (AREPR - Emergency Response Archive of Puerto Rico) is a cross-institutional project developing an open-access digital repository of Puerto Rican artifacts of disasters pertaining to Hurricane María (2017), the Guayanilla earthquakes (2020), and the COVID-19 pandemic (2020).

The project involves collaboration between MSU's Dr. Christina Boyles, the University of Puerto Rico-Río Piedras, the University of Puerto Rico-Mayagüez, and the Digital Library of the Caribbean. AREPR is grant-supported, allowing partnership with five community organizations across the main island of Puerto Rico, including: El Puente-Enlace Latino de Acción Climática, Comedores Sociales de Puerto Rico, JunteGente, the Instituto Transdisciplinario de Investigación-Acción Social (ITIAS), and Operation Blessing.

By foregrounding the lived experiences of Puerto Ricans through oral history interviews and preserving archival documents and images, AREPR offers new ways of relating to impending climate catastrophes that are socially just.

Connecting community members with the web development and metadata capabilities of MSU has allowed collected materials to be assembled in a freely available site that highlights the innovative knowledge production of grassroots community organizations in Puerto Rico. Not only do these materials have the potential to save lives but are also imperative to developing future emergency protocols based on local knowledge and community action.

Distinguished Partnership Award for Community-Engaged Research

2022 Recipient

ADVOCACY AND OTHER COMMUNITY TACTICS TO CHALLENGE BARRIERS TO HIV CARE FOR GAY AND BISEXUAL MEN AND TRANSGENDER WOMEN (PROJECT ACT)

Robin Lin Miller, College of Social Science

MPact Global Action for Gay Men's Health and Rights

Introduced by Douglas A. Gage, Vice President, Office of Research and Innovation

In 2016, Dr. Robin Lin Miller began partnering with MPact Global Action for Gay Men's Health and Rights (MPact), a transnational civil-society organization (CSO), to dismantle barriers to HIV care for gay and bisexual men and transgender women. Global estimates have suggested infection of these populations is increasing despite efforts to end the HIV epidemic and the stigma that fuels it.

Project ACT, led by MPact, included LGBT-led CSOs in Burundi, Cameroon, Côte d'Ivoire, the Dominican Republic, Ghana, Jamaica, and Zimbabwe. Miller was part of the project's leadership team and supported the development and implementation of strategies to address barriers to accessing HIV care. Miller provided the team with ongoing empirical support in culturally responsive approaches to help guide the partnership and document both challenges and successes.

The partnership led to systems for monitoring stigma and discrimination in the provision of HIV healthcare, routine healthcare worker sensitization efforts, and healthcare-community partnerships to improve access to HIV services. Notable achievements of the partnership include Jamaica's first submission on the state of transgender access to healthcare to the United Nations Human Rights Council Universal Period Review, the establishment of national sensitivity training standards in the Dominican Republic, and expanded access to affirming HIV care in Ghana, Cameroon, and Zimbabwe.

Provost for University Outreach and Engagement*

2022 Recipient

STEPHEN L. ESQUITH, Residential College in the Arts and Humanities

Introduced by Marilyn J. Amey, Interim Associate Provost for Faculty and Academic Staff Development

For more than 30 years, Stephen Esquith has dedicated his career to collaborative partnerships with community-based organizations, both locally and globally. With a commitment to community engagement, he led University efforts to create - and served as the founding dean of - the Residential College in the Arts and Humanities (RCAH), which opened in 2007 with the notion of students “living their learning” through community-engaged work at the forefront of its curriculum.

Today the College advances its work in community engagement around the values of sustained partnerships, radical reciprocity, and co-generated knowledge. Through Esquith’s leadership and encouragement, the RCAH’s community-engaged course requirements have evolved, as has the diversity of its partnerships. Students engage with community partners in a variety of creative activities, including poetry in prison and ethnography using photography, music, and theater, to name just a few.

As the college grew, Esquith supported the development of the Network for Global Civic Engagement to promote undergraduate research and teaching and learning in Michigan, Costa Rica, Tanzania, Puerto Rico, Mali, and elsewhere. The Network also connects RCAH students and faculty with other MSU colleges and departments and brings global partners to campus as visiting scholars and teachers.

Esquith has also taken his own community-engaged scholarship to Mali, Africa, teaching seminars on ethics and development at the University of Bamako. He is currently working on peace-building and education projects for children in Mali and Michigan, which builds on his 15 years of teaching philosophy to middle school children in both countries.

Dr. Esquith has recently returned to the faculty where he plans to continue preparing students for rich lives of purpose and contribution by teaching RCAH courses on civic engagement and political theory.

Michigan State University Community Engagement Scholarship Lifetime Achievement Award

GORDON HENRY, JR.

Professor and Audrey and John Leslie Endowed Chair in North American Indian and Indigenous Literary Studies
College of Arts and Letter

Introduced by Nathan Lambertson, Ziibiwing Center of Anishinaabe Culture and Lifeways, and Lisa Tiger Martin, Gunn Lake Tribe Tribal Historic Preservation Office

Dr. Gordon Henry is an accomplished poet, activist teacher-scholar, and a registered citizen of the White Earth Anishinaabe Nation, as well as an award-winning creative scholar with an international reputation. Some of his greatest passions include highlighting Indigenous storytellers and preserving their cultural heritage through his co-edited book series with MSU Press, American Indian Studies Series. He has also co-edited the collection of North American Indigenous graphic literature, Not (Just) (An)other. Most recently, his work was included in U.S. Poet Laureate Joy Harjo's, Living Nations, Living Words project. Henry also has served as Gordon Russell Visiting Scholar twice at Dartmouth College that led to the co-edited, Afterlives of Indigenous Archives. His works have appeared in translation internationally and have included community members, scholars, and creators.

In his past capacity as director of the Native American Institute (2010-2014), Henry co-created a Native American Youth Summer Film Camp, collaborated with the Center for Regional Food Systems on a webinar series on "Tribal Agriculture and Natural Resources," and worked with the Michigan Economic Development Corporation on the Michigan Tribal Economic Forum.

Henry's work is constantly evolving to meet current needs including the digital humanities storytelling project, Indigistory, which was the recipient of the 2018 Distinguished Partnership Award for Community-Engaged Creative Activity. This award-winning project resulted in multiple community digital storytelling workshops, as well as programming for Indigenous people throughout the state of Michigan.

Henry organized and continues to serve on the Wewaawiindamojig (Indigenous Advisory Board) that has funded numerous Anishinaabe community language and culture events and initiatives.

This spring, Henry plans to release a book of poetry titled, Spirit Matters: White Clay, Red Exits, Distant Others.
